Danger to the Louvre.

A new danger threatens the Louvre in Paris, France, says the London Chronicle. The great palace of art has for years been imperiled by the presence of the colonial office in the wing on the river front, and each session the minister of fine arts vainly asks that the colonies shall be provided for elsewhere. The colonial minister never objects to the demand, but professes an equal solicitude for the safety of the picture galleries. Now, however, it has been discovered that the colonial minister has had a room fitted up for his automobile exactly beneath the Rubens gallery. An explosion of petrol might occur here any day, and then the far famed collections might be burned up.

LETTER FROM THE SEA

Journal Correspondent Tells of Oregon's Greatest Coming Sea-ide Resort

Newport, Ore., July 20.—Like all other parts of Oregon, Newport feels the effects of the Lewis and Clark fair, and the number of people at this summer resort is not as large as usual. It was expected that many fair visitors would be brought here, but the eastern visitors know about as little of this delightful spot as they do of the charms of Timbuctoo or Cham-skata. So the crowds are not anywhere like they were in former years at this time. But we hope for better things in August. The attractions are all here, and all we lack is the population. The hills are green, the waters blue, the bathing gets ripe with the first water melons and improves in quality as the season advances. We have it almost to ourselves, and while Captain Walter Lyons may be able to preside over his riding club of thirty ladies, if he will bring them over the mountains to Nye creek he will find that he is not the only pebble on the beach.

Hotels Have Room.

The hotels are not at all crowded. The Sunday excursions on the C. & B. railroad tax them considerable. The Abbey house, the Bay View, the Ocean, the Irving house at Nye Creek and the Monterey are all running as usual. Mrs. Fitzpatrick, proprietor of the Monterey, and her daughters are in charge of that resort on the north beach. The property is a valuable one and is for sale at a bargain. There are 160 acres of land and about $5000 in improvements. Mr. Le Branch of Salem has been trying to buy it and there are others. These hotel properties will some day be very valuable. When the Santa Fe builds up the coast, when the C. & E. is extended to Salt Lake, when Gould builds through to the coast, when the Chicago & North western comes through Oregon, there will be a row of summer residences on all the beaches, and the hotels like the Monterey will be run summer and winter.

The Grand Pacific.

Mr. Lease, the Corvallis and Toledo banker, has converted the old Bayley residence on the bay into a fine modern summer resort. He has associated with him Mr. Fitz Maurice of eastern Oregon, an experienced hotel man and good entertainer, who, with his family, are setting a fine table and have really a very elegant place. There are open grates in the parlors and bedrooms, and a beautiful view out over the bay and through the jetties into the open Pacific, a view of the ocean and the mountains. Tuesday evening there was a party of young people assembled in the parlors and a fine musicale was rendered by Misses Dent and Potter of Portland in vocal, Miss Patrick of Des Moines, Ia., piano, Mac and Laurence Hofer and Tessa Dent on violin, mandolin and guitar.

Improvements.

The new pier is nearing completion at Olssonville, and soon the steamer will be stopping there for people bound for the upper parts of the city and a short cut has been made through the hill to Nye Creek. Bulkheads are being built and the street graded full width down to the water front, while the older part of Newport seems to be washing into the bay. But they will get a move on down there one of these days and rebuild their street and put in the concrete bulkhead and new piers for steamers to land. For he it known the steamers from Portland and San Francisco are now calling in here and taking passengers. R. D. Hume of Wedderburn, Curry county, came in here to take the Newport for his home port. The opening of this harbor to commerce cannot always be prevented, and when vessels come and go the people will travel this way.

A Club Room.

In imitation to the forestry building Sam Irving has constructed of fir logs a club house and bowling alley in connection with his hotel, which will be thrown open this week or next, when a few finishing touches will be put on the structure. This will be a great attraction, and Sam is too good a Presbyterian to tolerate anything but "straight goods" around his place. The influence of the forestry building is being seen in the erection of log cabins in all parts of the state, and this is one of the prettiest ones that has yet been designed.

"Speak for it" she cried to doggie. For she knew in her little heart, That German Syrup, home's great treasure, Could health and joy impart.

¶The greatest tonic on earth is a good night's rest. Restless nights and the terrible exhaustion of a hacking cough are dread dangers of the poor consumptive. ¶But why this fear of the night when a few doses of Dr. Boesche's German Syrup will insure refreshing sleep, entirely free from cough or night sweat? Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by taking German Syrup. ¶We know by the experience of over thirty-five years that one 75-cent bottle of German Syrup will speedily relieve or cure the worst coughs, colds, bronchial or lung troubles—and that, even in bad cases of consumption, one large bottle of German Syrup will work wonders. ¶Two sizes, 25c and 75c. ### Need Friends in Their Business.

How professional men make acquaintances can be illustrated by the story of two men whom I know, says Arthur Goodrich in Leslie's Monthly. One of them, a dentist, had a practical father, who taught him how good an investment good clothes and many friends might be.

This doctor lived for many years at leading hotels, and at evening mingled socially with the guests. There was never a pleasanter man than he at these leisure times, nor a man of better appearance, although during the early years he was constantly in debt to his father, and in all his social life he never mentioned his profession or his work unless such talk came naturally into the conversation.

Each year he went to Europe and dined at the captain's table, always in immaculate evening clothes. Sometimes he went and returned in the same ship, for there was little to gain by staying abroad. Everybody liked him, and today he has an immense practice, a considerable portion of which, he admits frankly, can be traced to his steamship acquaintance. One day, a year ago, he met a lawyer of about his own age and degree of success, at their club.

"I'm going abroad Saturday," said the lawyer. "Come along," he added, half in jest. The doctor hesitated for a moment in thought. "All right," he said, "what boat?" The lawyer told him and then asked with some surprise how he could manage to be away on such short notice, and if he had intended to take his vacation at that time. "I've been over eighteen times," said the doctor with a genial smile, "and for the same reason that you have gone and are going. We'll work the boat together, you and I."
